MAGGIE'S STORY:

Maggie's mother died when she was a baby. Her aunt attempted to take care of her, but she became sick and malnourished, to almost dying, which led them to bring her to the orphanage.

When Maggie was 7 years old, coming to grips of how her mother had died, she remained positive and said that she was still thankful to God that she had someone to take care of her.

Maggie is now 13 years old. She is a good student and top of her class. In her exams, she had such high marks that she qualified for an elite boarding school. But this is not the end of her story.

Maggie has an older brother who is now an adult. He is in a good situation with his relatives and he wanted for Maggie to rejoin their family. She has been visiting them during the holidays the past couple of years and all agree that this is a good time for all for this reconciliation.

We let them choose the school that they would like for Maggie to attend, assuring them that we would continue to pay for all her schooling expenses. (We expect that she will be going to University in the future) They chose a very good Christian School close to them so she will be able to be home in the evenings to help develop good bonding with them. Then the plan is for her to go to the boarding school next term with her orphanage siblings.
